What is the tower thinking and feeling as he looks from his beloved in the distance down to his 'hands' and considers his situation?

thwarted, exasperated, infuriated

Look at the way the action moves between what the towers are doing and the effect this has on the deck of the bridge and the cars. What words can you collect to describe these different sides of the story?

Strain, grasp, grapple

Jostle, vault, spasm

As the towers slowly edge their hands towards each other, the tension on the cables becomes too great and they cannot take the strain. What onomatopoeic words can you find to describe the sounds as the bridge begins to collapse? Are there other things in the story that would also be making onomatopoeic noises?

Murmur, twang, beep
